Hugo Renard, Étincelle, 2017, Pigmentary printing, 43 x 550 cm.

Detail from Étincelle, 2017, Pigmentary printing, 43 x 550 cm.

In This serial photographs called Étincelle, it's dog's name and means «spark», we can see a dog hide by a long leash. The artist documents a trip where the subject became dog's movement playing with the leash. The picture frame is quite narrow and dog's energy helped to make different kind of composition.

The relation between each pictures is connected by the leash, this formal relation helps to make a better reception when you look far away, but it can also be seen picture by picture when you get closer.

It is also a tribute to analog photography with this long digital prints remembering the structure of a developed film.
